

Diploma Policy of the Faculty of Law

The mission of the Faculty of Law of Kobe University is to nurture the growth of human resources that possess a broad understanding of liberal arts and have gained an in-depth knowledge of law and political science so that one can not only tackle, but also solve, the many difficult problems that are encountered in our society today. To this end, we endeavor to ensure that those who have completed this program will have the necessary skill sets to be able to play a prominent future role in fields such as law and political science

To achieve these objectives, the Faculty of Law awards bachelor's degrees in accordance with the following policies:

Degree: Bachelor of Laws

Based on the Kobe University Diploma Policy, bachelor's degrees in law are conferred upon those students who:

- a) have studied at the Faculty of Law for the required duration and have obtained the necessary credits in order to fulfill the graduation requirements.
- b) have acquired or cultivated the following skills or values in addition to those required by the Kobe University Diploma Policy:
 - In-depth knowledge and expertise in law.
 - In-depth knowledge and expertise in political science.
 - The ability to acknowledge and respect diverse values and ideas in order to comprehend and assess problems in the fields of law and politics.
 - The ability to generate new ideas by thinking comprehensively in order to solve complex problems.